DEED CAR DELIVERING DOCUMENTS RAPIDLY

Since Wednesday mid-afternoon the Dawes commission car has stood on the siding on the Frisco doing literally a land office business.

On the road since March 4th, delivering Choctaw and Chickasaw deeds in person, the party has already delivered about one-third of their cargo. At Stonewall, where the car tarried for a day before coming to Ada, about 250 deeds were handed to allottees. Up to this hour at Ada there have been delivered about 500.

These are all for land selected before last year--most of the land having been selected 2 or 3 years ago.

The party started with 32,000 of such deeds. Their car is a combination one;

one end being fitted up like a register of deeds office, the other like an ordinary passenger coach.

The following government clerks constitute the party in charge: W. P. Chaney, A. P. Conant, F. L. Doble, J. L. Gary, J. W. Horner, and W. A. Rambo.

Tonight the car goes on down to Mill Creek.

Gwin, Mays & Co. are receiving much praise for their leading cigar "Pontotoc County." It's the best smoke in Ada--Gwin, Mays & Co. 6tf

Mr. Chas. McPherran, candidate for Congress, will address the people at Francis on next Saturday night. 6-3td

RULES AND REGULATIONS OF THE STATE PRIMARY

Democratic candidates for United States senator are to have a free and easy, go-as-you-please contest in the primary election ordered at the Tulsa meeting by the Democratic state central committee, to be held uniformly throughout the new state May 23. A plurality vote nominates. It was ruled that the candidates are to be separated on the ticket as to the two territories voted upon at large, and the highest Oklahoma man and the highest Indian Territory man to be the parties nominated.

Electors are not to vote for more than one candidate from each territory. The whole fight in committee centered around this construction. An effort was made to turn the proposition entirely loose and allow the two highest men, irrespective of territorial division, to be the nominees, but this, as well as an effort to hold up the senatorial race until the general election day, August 6, and allow that to be the primary nomination failed, after much discussion. The entire attendance appears to be enthusiastic over the result, although there is some question as to the committee's power to restrict the choice in a sectional way. No restrictions are placed upon nominations for state offices.

A simple plurality where more than two candidates are offering is sufficient. The primaries ordered only apply to state offices and United States senators. For congressional, judicial, legislative, county and township nominations, the committee recommended that the committees in such districts call primaries for the day of the general primary, it being optional, however, whether this or the convention method is used. The state convention to ratify the result.

The basis of representation is to be fixed by the executive committee of the state, which was called to meet in Oklahoma City, 27. Shawnee was the only other place offering for it.

To cover the expense of holding the primary, candidates for United States senators are assessed $5, and all other state officers $3 for each of the seventy-five counties of the state. Candidates for supreme judge who are nominated by districts, but voted upon at large, are assessed $10 for each county in their supreme judicial district. It was first proposed to assess candidates for governor and for United States senate $1,000 each.

Candidates' names and assessments must be filed with the state committee at least twenty days prior to March 23.

Other rules and requirements governing the conduct of the primary will be promulgated by the state committee.

Where The Democrat Was Wrong.

So uniformly right on public questions is The Democrat that seldom does The News feel warranted in taking issue with that paper. But there was something in the last issue of our contemporary which we can't pass up.

In commenting on the street sprinkling problem it advocated the use of crude oil, saying that four sprinklings of the liquid would allay the dust for an entire season, etc. The editor of The Democrat said he had seen it tried, indicating he knew whereof he spoke.

Yes, and we have seen it tried. We have seen the ladies' skirts all bedraggled in the oily slime, too, thereafter. We have digged the greasy dust from about our ears; have picked up little white-froked girls where they had fallen; have breathed the nauseous stench from oiled streets which stank to heaven--so the writer reckons, though he never got that high up.

If The Democrat wants to force the dear ladies to wear slickers for underwear let it go on with its crude oil crusade. As for The News, it's for clean water and an abundance of it. It would have the ladies still trip down the streets with impunity, immaculate in summer garb, without fear for their dainty lingerie.

Upon further reflection it occurs to us The Democrat's agitation might be all right provided all the women could be persuaded to wear short skirts, short enough to be out of reach of the oil. The News has always advocated this sort of street dress. It is sensible, hygienic, and usually becoming. Let The Democrat first start a crusade for the dress reform.

Speaking Postponed.

Under conditions as they developed it was thought best to postpone the speaking date of Hon. Chas. E. McPherran, who was announced to address the Democratic voters of this place Wednesday night on his candidacy for Congress. Mr. McPherran hopes yet in the near future to speak to our people.

Rev. G. W. Jefferson, E. A. Hardee and R. W. Smith came up from Hickory today to go out and attend at Midland the 5th Sunday meeting of the Baptist Banner Association.

PLATFORM ON WHICH M. L. TURNER STANDS

I FAVOR AND SHALL SUPPORT:

The initiative and referendum.
An eight-hour day for all labor.
Exclusion of Oriental labor from the United States.

National legislation to suppress manipulation of the markets in farm products, railway and other stocks.

Income and inheritance tax.

National legislation to prohibit railroad and other corporations from capitalizing in excess of actual value.

Granting authority to the interstate commerce commission to ascertain the actual value by inventory, of the railroads of the country, for the purpose of ascertaining the true basis of fixing rates.

Reduction of tariff on necessities of life and readjustment of schedules to a basis which will operate against the formation and protection of trusts.

Stringent anti-trust laws with effective provisions and enforceable penalties.

A more rigid and effective law against railroad rebates and discriminations, which will provide severe penalties for the guilty.

National encouragement of the movement to build and maintain good roads.

Nomination of all candidates for office by primary election, including the first two United States senators from Oklahoma.

Election of United States senators by popular vote.

Removal of restrictions from Indian lands other than homesteads of full-bloods.

Purchase by the state at fair value

and operation thereof for benefit of schools.

A fair prorata of federal buildings as compared with the most favored of other states.

Improvement of rivers as far as navigable within and contiguous to the state.

The right of Indians to be heard in court to obtain just settlement of their claims against the United States.

Equal rights to all; special privileges to none.

I SHALL OPPOSE:

Combination of capital for the purpose of reducing the price of labor or its product.

Usurpation by the federal government of powers granted by the Constitution to the several states.

Campaign contributions from corporations.

Employment of child labor.

Any legislation which fosters special privilege or promotes private monopoly.

The principle involved in the measure recently before congress known as the "emergency currency" bill. I believe that the issuance of money is a function belonging to the general government and should be exercised by it.

Upon the principles of democracy and the above declarations, I ask the support of democratic voters in the new state of Oklahoma for one of the two United States senators from this state.

PROFESSOR SAYS COMET WILL NOT HIT THE EARTH

"The world will be saved from destruction by the Matteucci comet" said Prof. L. Howell Lewis, yesterday. Prof. Lewis received a communication from the department of agriculture at Washington saying that the Matteucci comet had been deflected in its mad flight toward the earth and would be eventually absorbed by the sun.

Ever since Prof. Lewis' first article in connection with this phantom monster of the air, inquiries have poured into the Oklahoman office asking for further information. Great excitement prevailed in the negro settlements in Indian Territory. At Fort Gibson and Westville the negroes all quit work and held open meetings each evening, praying that the world be spared and the comet deflected.

Today was when the astronomers estimated that the comet would reach the earth providing its course was not changed. The continued warm weather of the past two weeks was a sign to the superstitious that the end of the world was near at hand, and many believed that the prophecy of the Bible that the world would be destroyed by fire, was about to be fulfilled.

It was reported that the first view of the comet would be had at 4 o'clock yesterday morning just above the horizon. Numerous Oklahoma City citizens looked furtively in that direction during the small hours of the morning and felt relief when the dull gray of the morning sky was not broken by the flash of Matteucci's tail.--Oklahoman.

United States Senator.

The honorable M. L. Williams, a prominent attorney and orator of recognized ability, arrived in Ada this morning and will address the people this evening in behalf of the candidacy of M. L. Turner of Oklahoma City for the United States senate. To indicate the prominence of Mr. Williams and that those who attend his meeting will not be disappointed, it is suggested that Mr. Williams has been a presidential elector and has very effectively spoken throughout the east under the auspices of the National Democratic committee in support of the Democratic nominee for president of the United States.

LOWDEN FOR DISTRICT CLERK.

One of Ada's Old-Timers Seeks the Democratic Nomination.

With pleasure The News presents to the Democratic voters of Pontotoc county the name of W. D. Lowden for their consideration in the primary May 23rd, for the important office of district clerk.

Bill Lowden is too well known in these parts to warrant any elaborate introduction on The News' part. He was reared in Kaufman county, Texas, where his father ran a mill and was famous in those good old days for hospitality. Among the Confederate soldiery "Lowden's Mill" was noted far and wide as a haven of rest and plenty whose portals were ever thrown wide.

Twenty years ago Mr. Lowden came to Indian Territory and for ten years has been a resident of Ada, starting here as a store clerk when Ada was a mere inland trading point, and later going into business for himself. Previously he was devoted to farming.

This year is the first time Bill Lowden ever sought an office. He was chosen a pioneer alderman of the city, and for several years was kept on the school board. Not that he sought these honors, but his public services were so valuable the people would not let him loose.

Scarcely could a better known or better liked man be found in this community than W. D. Lowden—nor a better Democrat. Unquestionably he will make a splendid race.

Death of Howard Harper

Howard, ten-year-old son of Art and Ada Harper of Center died March 25 of congestion, after an illness of two days. Little Howard was of sweet disposition, a bright faced boy loved by all his little playmates. Father and mother, brothers and sisters, may God give you grace to say Thy will be done on earth as in Heaven, where little Howard is resting in God's sweet smiles awaiting his little brothers and sisters and papa and mama to meet him up in the bright mansions above where there is no sickness, sorrow, pain nor parting, in that bright sweet home prepared for all who will put their trust in him. All we can say to the sorrowing ones, is cast your burdens at Jesus feet and say Thy will be done.

So let him sleep that dreamless sleep. Our sorrow clustering around his head; Be comforted ye loved who weep, He lives with God—he is not dead

A friend.

Miss Stewart's remarkable girlish personality and charming ways are shown to particular advantage in the role of the beautiful Greek maiden in which role it is said she has proved herself a more capable actress than anything in which she has been seen, not excepting her marked success in Juliet and Rosalind.

Dallas Morning News says: "Miss Stewart enacted the role of Rosalind with vividness and exceptional ability. Her interpretation pleased every one and caused intensified interest."

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

GRADE READY FOR CHANGE.

Katy's Line at Tyrola Will Make Detour of Sand Bars.

The Katy has practically finished the grading for the change of line on the Shawnee division in the vicinity of the South Canadian river bridge. The old line, now in use, runs down the river and some of it is built on sandbars. After crossing the river at Tyrola, the line continues up a creek in order to get the low grade.

The new line commences two miles south of Tyrola, makes a detour along higher ground and comes back to the river at the old bridge. On the other side the line has been run on higher ground and strikes the old line near Konawa.

The grade of the new line has been built of sand, which will be held together by extensive riprapping.

LAND PATENTS OF INTEREST.

Signatures of Two of the Early Presidents on Them.

W. K. McCall of the Franklin County State bank of Ottawa, who is somewhat of a gatherer of relics, has three land patents which are pretty interesting considering that the signatures of two of the early presidents of the United States are contained in two of them, says the Kansas City Journal. Two of the instruments are patents of land in the northwest territory. One of them is to land in Belmont county, Ohio, and the other to land in Jefferson county. Jonathan Pickering received a tract of land in the first-named county. The patent was signed on June 23, 1826, by President Adams. The signature reads simply "J. Q. Adams." The other patent was made to William Johnson, and was signed by James Madison, president of the United States, on July 30, 1812. The third instrument gives a tract of land in La Salle county, Illinois, to James Caldwell. The patent was signed by J. K. Stephens, secretary to President Polk, for the president, on December 1, 1840. The instruments are made of sheepskin. They were gathered by the father of Mr. McCall.

A HOUSE OF MARBLE CHIPS.

Remarkable Patchwork Palace Going Up in Macon, Ga.

The patchwork palace being built by Dr. W. W. Billingslea in Macon, Ga., has reached the second story. In many respects this will be the most unique dwelling house in Macon. It was something over a year ago when Dr. Billingslea conceived the idea of building a house with the chips from the marble used in building the new federal building in this city. It was to be his own house, planned and built by himself, after his own ideas, so he drew the plans, and in April started work. He made arrangements with the contractors at the government building to cart away all the chips and broken marble. With day laborers he mixed the cement and marble and up grew the walls. The house is commodious. There is to be a steel and cement roof, with roof garden, and the elevator will run from the basement. With the exception of the day labor, Dr. Billingslea has done all the work on the house. Up to date the material, labor and every expense amounts to less than $1,000, and he expects to complete the building for less than $1,500.

Complimented.

A few weeks ago a Philadelphia man was in a North Carolina town of very few inhabitants. One day when he was on the point of making a purchase he discovered that he had exhausted his small change. The shopkeeper could not "break" the $10 bill offered him, and the northern man went out in the main street to see how he might solve the difficulty. He asked several persons, but still on one had the requisite amount for the bill. At last an old, white-haired seely negro came along. In sheer desperation the Philadelphia man said:

"Uncle, can you change a $10 bill for me?"

"Uncle" looked dazed for the moment. Then his shuffling figure straightened. With a doffing of the hat and a bow worthy of Chesterfield, he replied with dignity:

"No, marse, I can't change no $10 bill; but I done 'preciates the compliment jes' the same, sah."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Diplomacy.

"Listen," said the girl as the woman came in from the party at three o'clock in the morning and stood at the head of her bed. "Do you hear her sob, the woman above? She has been sobbing like that for an hour. Now, listen to his big, gruff voice storming at her."

"I'll put a stop to that," the woman declared, as she hurried out of the flat on up stairs.

"Well," said the girl, when she had come down again, "what did you do? Threaten him with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Wives?"

"Not at all," said the woman. "I simply rang his bell and asked him if there was something I could do for his wife. Wasn't she ill? We could hear her crying beneath in our bedroom, I told him. He thanked me and said there was nothing I could do; but you don't hear any more sobbing, do you?"

Had Ambitions.

Secretary Shaw, searching for the hidden things in the lives of his hundreds of clerks, had blanks sent around the treasury asking each clerk to give his vital statistics. One line requested an answer to the question: "Are you suffering from any disease?"

When the blanks came in it was found that one man said he had tuberculosis. Secretary Shaw sent for him. He came in, a big, broad-shouldered negro messenger, who looked healthy enough to live 50 years.

"Why," said the secretary, "you haven't got tuberculosis!"

"Ain't I?" asked the negro.

"No you haven't. You are perfectly healthy. Why did you write on this blank that you have tuberculosis?"

"Well," said the messenger, "I dunno; 'ceptin' if there's anythin' fashionable goin' 'round I want it."

Something Like It.

"I asked the boss to supplement my salary to-day."

"Did he do it?"

"No; gave me the haha."

"Sort of comic supplement, eh?"

ON SECRET SERVICE

True Stories of Experiences in the State, War, Treasury and Postoffice Departments.

By COL. JASPER EWING BRADY
State Censor of Telegraphs and Chief Signal Officer, U. S. A., Santiago de Cuba.)

The New $100,000 Policy

"Sid, I'm going to take a run down to New York for a day or so. You watch out at the office until I get back. Nothing special doing here, but something may come up. Address me at the Grand hotel until further notice." Thus spoke Col. Jack Cheney to his friend and associate, Sidney Guthrie, one bright, warm morning in June.

"What is it, colonel? A business trip or just a desire to have a look at old Broadway?"

"Both, Sid, both. Chicago is a little dead now. I've put in a pretty hard winter and spring, and now I think I'll take a rest for a few days. Of course I'll look in the office several times while I'm there."

"All right, Jack. We'll try to get along without you for awhile. Have a good time and come back when you're rested."

Jeff, the ebullient faithful servant, was told to get the colonel's bag ready. Sometimes when away on trips Col. Cheney took Jeff along as his personal attendant. Jeff hoped he would do so this time, but the colonel said:

"No, Jeff, not this trip. Next time maybe. I'm just going to loaf for awhile in New York and vicinity, and I want to get away from every one." "Ah'm drestful sorry to see you go, kunnel, but Ah'll try an' survive."

"Oh, I guess you'll get along all right. Mr. Guthrie will probably keep you busy."

"Dat's jess it, kunnel. Mistah Guthrie do keep me powful busy; mo'n you do."

"Well, Jeff, I've noticed you're getting a trifle fat and a little extra work won't hurt you. Get out, you rascal!" "Yas, sah. Huh, huh," chuckled Jeff, as he went out. Jeff once said "He always noticed Kunnel Cheney only abuse dose he loved. When he was powful perillite ter anyone hit meant dar was gwine to be se'yus trouble."

The Lake Shore Limited that evening carried Cheney eastward, and he gave himself up to complete relaxation. He was tired, brain frayed, and wanted a little surcease. He buried himself in a light novel and just laid off. At six the next night he landed in New York. At the Grand hotel he met several chance acquaintances. After supper he wandered up to the Casino. Some light fantastic musical comedy was playing there, and Cheney really enjoyed it. Between the acts he strolled out in the foyer and was enjoying a quiet smoke when he heard a voice say:

"By Jove, it can't be. No—yes it is. Hello, Col. Cheney, how are you?"

The colonel turned, and there stood Mr. Darius P. King, president of one of the great life insurance companies. Cheney knew him well, had done a great deal of delicate and intricate work for his company, and Mr. King had a profound liking for Cheney as a detective and as a soldier, but above all as a man. They saw each other frequently when either came to Chicago or New York, and as Mr. King was a wealthy unencumbered widower, Cheney was more than glad to see him. A cordial handshake and he said:

"Why, I am glad to see you, King. More than glad."

"What brings you east this time?"

"Nothing, King, absolutely nothing." "Nothing? Well, by Jove, this is the first time I've ever known you to be doing nothing."

"Well, you see, I got a little tired out, wanted to get away, and here I am for a few days' rest."

"New York's a good place to rest."

The commencement of the second act interrupted the conversation, but after the theater the two men went to a restaurant, had a quiet little supper and a heart to heart talk. It was 12:30 when they parted, and Cheney was to lunch with King at 12:30 the next day. "Come down earlier than 12:30," said King, "and stay as late as you like. My office is a good place to loaf."

"I've never seen any loafing there," laughed Cheney, remembering that King was called "the stiletto," on account of his incisive manner and actions. "Good night, old man."

"Good night, colonel."

At noon the next day Cheney strided into the stately marble pile on lower Broadway, known as the home office of King's life insurance company. It was like getting up to royalty to reach the head of one of these great financial institutions, but Col. Cheney's card was an open sesame, and in a few minutes he was comfortably fixed in King's palatial office. Mr. King was seated behind his desk, on which were papers, checks and what not. All about was a seeming confusion, but the president knew every paper, every item.

"Anything new, King?" asked Cheney, lighting a fragrant cigar.

"No," answered King, holding a package of papers and a check in his hand. He looked intently at the papers, studied a minute, then raising his head he said:

remember your man Guthrie has had several successful ones. I've got one right now, have had it ever since these papers came to me for approval yesterday morning, and, like Banco's ghost, it will not down."

"What's the case, King?" asked Cheney, beginning to take notice. Intuitively his mind sensed mystery.

"It's a death claim for $100,000. That in itself is not unusual, and the papers are regularly made out. The policy had only been in force 30 days, when the insured died. That, too, is not unusual; but the claim comes up from Mexico, and everything from Mexico reeks of fraud."

"Where does the hunch come in?"

"The 'hunch' says it's fraud. But the papers have been passed on by the various regular departments and committees, and sent me for approval. I guess I'll have to sign them up and get them out of the way." Mr. King dipped his pen in the ink and was about to sign his name, when Cheney quietly said:

"Wait—don't sign."

"Why not?"

"Well, I'm away on a vacation, and this trip to Mexico looks good to me. You give me the papers and draft for $100,000, also give me authority to act in the case. I'll go to Mexico, and if I find everything O. K. I'll pay the claim; if not, why I'll run down the culprit for you."

"By Jove, that's a good idea. You bet I'll do it, and gladly." In a few moments the check, papers and all documents were in Cheney's possession, and after luncheon he bade King good bye, saying he would study the papers all afternoon and that night would leave for Mexico. He did study the papers carefully, from the application to the death claim. The two medical examinations, inspection report, everything was in due form. The insured's name was Juan Silva; occupation, rancher; residence, near Torreon, Mexico; the cause of death was given as typhus fever, and the beneficiary's name was Maria Silva, sister. The medical examination revealed the fact that Juan Silva had one brother and sister living, none dead; the father and mother had been killed years ago by the Yaqui Indians. The family history was good; Juan Silva was 35 years old, wealthy and healthy, and according to the American table of mortality had an expectation of 31.78 years. Yet one month after he was dead and his sister was to get $100,000. "That's a good deal of money for a Greaser," muttered Cheney. "I never saw one worth that much."

The agent in the case was R. H. Thomas, agency manager at Torreon, and the premium, $3,875, had been paid in cash on delivery of the policy. That night Cheney left for the south and five days afterwards landed in Torreon. The Mexican is a suspicious being at best, and once let a well dressed American (Gringo, as he is called) alight in one of their towns and everybody, from the Jefe Politico down to the humblest peon, has a guess as to what his business is. Cheney was no different from the rest. He spoke Spanish rather well and allowed his landlord and others to imagine he had money and wanted to purchase a mine. This was his most plausible tale, because the Silvas, he learned, lived back in the hills and he would have to go there in course of the investigation. Cheney carefully looked up the parties in the case. Thomas, the agent, was well known. He lived well, wrote a good deal of insurance, drank a good deal of mescal and pulque, and was rather familiar with monte. He had a claim or two, and rumor had it that he was going in heavy for mines. He was reputed to have a wealthy brother back in the States who would back him financially. Thomas was a trifle sporty, perhaps, but not enough to condemn him, and his accounts were in good shape. That much Cheney had learned before leaving New York. The two doctors were named Wilmarth and Syddam, both men of character, Wilmarth being especially well thought of by everyone. He had lived in Torreon for years and had made many cures considered marvelous by the natives. The inspector was Charles M. Bull, a plain spoken, honest gentleman. So much for the insurance side.

Maria Silva, the beneficiary, was about 25 years old, and, like all Mexican women, looked a great deal older. She wasn't very popular; in fact the Silva family, though reputed to be wealthy, was not thought much of in the vicinity of Torreon. Their hacienda was situated about 19 miles due west of Torreon, midway between there and Guadalupe. Eduardo Silva, brother of Maria, was a typical Mexican high roller. The bull fights at Mexico City and Chihuahua were always graced by his presence. Juan Silva, the deceased, for years had been a recluse and was seldom seen. The application and examination had taken place in Torreon, and yet the physician's affidavit attached to the death claim had been made in

The undertaker also came from Guadalupe, in fact, in life the business was transacted in Torreon; in death, in Guadalupe. The only man who figured in both cases was Thomas, the agency manager in Torreon, and the man that wrote the policy.

"That's devilish funny," muttered Cheney as he went over the case. "Why couldn't those death claim papers have been signed here? Dr. Wilmarth should have seen that corpse." Cheney determined to take Dr. Wilmarth into his confidence, and did so. The doctor was more than willing to help him.

One morning a short time later they quietly slipped out of Torreon and that afternoon were in Guadalupe. They were good enough doctors and evidently honest in their statements. In answer to a question by Cheney Dr. Beltran said:

"Yes, he and Dr. Aguilera had attended Juan Silva. He had virulent typhus fever and after a few days' sickness he suddenly died. That was all they knew of the case."

"Not much, is it, Dr. Wilmarth?" said Cheney.

"No, and I am prone to believe the doctors."

"Now for the undertaker." That worthy's name was Sanchez, and he was a shifty Mexican.

"Si, senior, he had buried Juan Silva; that's a grand senior he was!"

"Cut that, please, senior," snapped Cheney. "You are sure the body was that of Juan Silva?"

"Ah, gracias Dio, senior, have I not known Juan Silva for many years? Si, si, it was his body, there could be no mistake."

"Where did you bury him?"

"At Dolores, on the hill yonder, senior."

Not much was made out of Sanchez, and Cheney and Wilmarth left.

"Doctor," said Cheney, "I'm going to have that body exhumed. I know it won't be in a very pleasing state, but you can perhaps tell whether the body is that of the man you examined for insurance."

"Unless there is a marked discrepancy between the corpse and the Juan Silva I examined, I may have trouble in making an identification, but we shall see."

It was not an easy matter to get permission to have the body exhumed, but a judicious use of money and moral suasion won out. Two husky peons were hired and Cheney sent for Sanchez, the undertaker, but he had disappeared. The party went to the cemetery and after more trouble found the grave of Juan Silva.

Cheney and Dr. Wilmarth sat down in the shade of a tree while the peons dug. They even smoked a corn husk cigarette or two, so common in Mexico. Mexican peons will work just so fast and no faster, and it was slow work waiting. But finally their shovels struck the coffin box and a little later it was lifted out and placed under a tree. Only a few minutes were needed to remove the screws, exposing the casket. When the lid was lifted and the contents exposed, Dr. Wilmarth said:

"Well, by God, colonel, the body has been destroyed by quick lime!"

Cheney looked. The detective was upmost now. A few quick motions and the entire top of the coffin was off. There was a mass of quick lime and matter exposed, but all semblance of a human body was gone. A few strands of dark hair at the head, the dim outline of a body, and the leather sole of a shoe at the foot were all that remained.

"Look at your medical report, quick, doctor. How tall was the man you examined?"

"Six feet one; weight, 192 pounds."

A tape line came out of Cheney's pocket and he carefully measured from the hair to the sole, following the outline of where the body had lain.

"Five feet nine, doctor," he said. "I thought so. A case of substitution, by all that's good. Now to nab the birds. We'll have them by to-morrow night."

Dr. Wilmarth had lived so long in Mexico, he was somewhat tumbled with the prevalent Manana spirit, but his American blood rose rapidly under the influence of Cheney.

The next morning about 11:30 they rode up to the Silva hacienda.

"Senorita Silva at home?" he asked a servant.

"Si, senior, si," and in a few minutes Senorita Maria Silva appeared on the porch.

"Buenos Dias, seniors," she said, in the soft language of old Mexico. "Won't you sit down?"

"Thank you, senorita," said Cheney, raising his hat. "Dr. Wilmarth and I represent the life insurance company in which your brother Juan was insured."

At the mention of the name "Juan" the senorita raised her dark eyes to heaven, made the sign of the cross and murmured: "Madre de Dios." Under his breath Cheney muttered "hypocrite," and continued:

"Yes, senorita, I have come down from New York to settle the claim."

"Settle the claim, senior! You mean you will pay me the money?" The senorita's eyes were sparkling. Cheney was watching her closely.

"Well, senorita," he replied, smiling, "there is a New York draft on the Anglo-American bank, of Mexico City, for $100,000. It's made payable to your order."

"Ah, senior, I thank you, I thank you."

"Don't thank me, senorita, thank your brother Juan, who was thoughtful enough to provide for you."

"Ah, Juan! Si, poor Juan." Again the solemn "Madre de Dios." Cheney determined on quick action vinced you are entitled to this check, you shall have it; but I'm not convinced now—far from it. I know you are not entitled to it." This last he thundered at her and she recoiled, almost paralyzed.

"What—you—mean?" she gasped.

"I mean," said Cheney, "that the body buried in Dolores at Guadalupe was not the body of the man insured a month ago. Quicklime was used to destroy the body buried, but the ruse did not work. We exhumed the body to-day and Dr. Wilmarth here positively states that it is not the corpse of the man he examined for the insurance. Sanchez, the undertaker, has fled towards the west coast, but he will be brought back. Now, senorita, who besides yourself and Sanchez are in this plot? Come, senorita, who?" Cheney's manner was commanding, his voice tense, his whole being was powerful. The woman utterly collapsed and muttered one word: "Thomas."

"Thomas!" said Cheney. "I thought so. Now, senorita, make a clean breast of it. The fraud has not been consummated, and if murder has not been done it may not go hard with you."

Womanlike, Senorita Silva told.

"Senor Thomas and I are in love. We are to be married soon. He wanted money; I didn't have any. He knew my brother Juan was not strong. He would insure his life for $100,000; another strong man would be examined and then disappear. Juan would die, papers would go in from Guadalupe; I would have $100,000, we would pay Sanchez, the undertaker, $10,000 because Sanchez knew; then we would be married and Senor Thomas and I would travel. Ah, senior, believe me, by my God, I am telling the truth." And with this she fell on her knees to Cheney.

"Rise, senorita," he said, gently. "And we will do what we can."

Taking the senorita with them, the doctor and Cheney returned to Torreon, reaching there after dusk. Bright and early next morning Cheney hunted up the American consul and made himself known. Together they went to the chief of police. His aid was promised and in a short while the three men appeared in Thomas' office. Mr. Thomas was smoking his cigarette and building air castles when Col. Cheney said:

"Mr. Thomas, I believe?"

"Yes, sir."

"I'm Col. Cheney, representing the home office of your company. I am compelled to give you into custody for fraud in the Silva case."

"Fraud! Why, man, what are you talking about?"

"Senorita Silva has confessed, Mr. Thomas; Sanchez has decamped, and your game is up."

It didn't take long to convince Thomas that the game was up; then he showed his gamefess and took his medicine. He had played for high stakes and lost. "San Juan de Ulloa for ten years," was his sentence. That meant death, because no man ever lived more than five years in that hell hole. Sanchez was caught and received the same sentence. Senorita Silva was pardoned by Diaz and took the veil.

Cheney and King had a dinner in New York later and Cheney said:

"Your 'hunch' was a good one, old man."

HAD REASON FOR BEING.

How Lack of Flavor of Cranberries Improved Turkey.

With all her wonderful fruits, California lacks a cranberry worthy of the name. A New England tourist ordered cranberry sauce with his turkey one Thanksgiving day at a hotel in Pasadena. An odd-looking and odd-tasting dish of stewed fruit was brought to him.

"What do you call this?" he asked the waitress, a girl from the New Hampshire mountains.

"Cranberry sauce, sir," she answered, with a faint smile of sympathy for his evident distaste.

"Cranberry sauce!" he echoed indignantly. "That has no more the flavor of a cranberry than a peanut has of a pumpkin."

"Maybe not," she replied demurely, "but you see it gives folks a great deal more reason to be thankful for the turkey."

Couldn't Afford It.

About a year ago Sewell Ford became a resident of Rye, N. Y. He had lived there only a short time before he discovered that one of his neighbors was Simeon Ford. The revelation was made over the telephone.

"Hello!" said a voice, "is this Sewell Ford?"

The author of "Shorty" admitted that it was.

"Well," went on the voice, "this is Simeon Ford. Some one's sent me your meat bill."

"Good! Why don't you pay it?"

"I will if you'll pay mine," said Simeon.

At last accounts the bargain had not been concluded. Simeon runs a hotel.—Exchange.

Old Bottles and New Wine

BY SHAN F. BULLOCK

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Twilight was falling through the autumn evening when we pushed out the black punt and set forth across the lake.

We were gliding through the twilight and the creeping mist away toward Clackan and the cottage there, in which Daniel was to prove himself before us all.

Daniel! How well we remembered him. How short a time it seemed since the days when he had sat among us in the school house there among the trees. And now he was back from college; and every one was proud of him, and we, his old playmates, were going to hear him preach the Word.

We made a goodly company. From far and near people had gathered to do Daniel honor. Clackan filled half the room; Gorteen gave its best and wisest. In the second row from the table sat Mary, Daniel's sweetheart, her father on this side, her mother on that. Everywhere one saw familiar faces, stern and rugged, beaten with rain and wind—faces that in the morning had looked up at the minister from the pews in Derryvad, and now were turned upon the door watching for sight of Daniel.

Hush! The door opened, and a little procession came in—the preacher first, Daniel next, the family following after one by one to their places on the first form.

There followed a hymn then a chapter from Isaiah, read well and feelingly; then a third hymn, and a shorter and more personal prayer, in which God was asked to bless the preaching of his word; then a minute of hush, followed by a dead hush as Daniel rose.

His face was flushed, his lips trembled a little; slowly he read a text: "Old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." He repeated it as if to Mary and himself, and then closed his Bible, laid it on the table, and began.

He opened confidently, with the surety of youth and the fluency of one well prepared. There was no halting; in a breath he was white-hot, brimming with words. They came like a torrent pouring down a mountain, so quick that one might hardly follow them, so insistent that one almost felt them whirl. I sat amazed, whelmed (you have seen willows bent toward a stream, or a weed bowed toward the sun); and already Daniel was deep, and frowns had gathered on the brows of many, when of a sudden the glamour went, and I had plain seeing.

What Daniel said I have long forgotten (though men at Clackan will repeat much of it to you even to-day); but given the text and the occasion, and you may easily guess the fashion of his discourses. It was just what you might expect of an ambitious youth gifted and not without education come fresh from the pastures of culture to shed light upon the darkness of his native hills. Three years ago Daniel had left us, filled with those old things; now, having browsed happily, he had come back shining with new things. Clackan was a dear place, its people worthy; but time had moved on, leaving it bound in ignorance. Such changes had come upon the world; such wonders had been revealed of late in the domains of knowledge! There was this wonderful theory of evolution. There were those extraordinary discoveries in science. There were these marvelous doings of the higher criticism. There was this new spirit of the age moving across the face of the waters. Back there lay those old dead things; here among us were those wonderful new things, quick, imperative, claiming, said Daniel, in a whirl of words, fullest consideration of all Christian men.

To the consideration of these, therefore, Daniel passed; and before him we ignorant loughsiders sat dumb, our faces set and hard. Boldly he tramped on our ignorance; boldly would lead us into light. All his learning and reading he drew upon, striving to give us true knowledge. We were narrow, prejudiced, intolerant; behold this new spirit of the age which should make us free. All men were brothers, another Christian soul was as good as another. Our ideas of religion were antiquated. Our conception of God was childish. We had vain notions of heaven and hell; we read our Bible ignorantly; we had never grasped the real spirit of Christ's message to the world.

Had Daniel stood in some city pulpit, doubtless everything he said would have won approval; but he was preaching in a hillside parlor to an ignorant little company, and he did foolishly, and we misunderstood him, and set our faces against him in pitying scorn. This our Daniel! This the man we had trusted and loved? This the result of education and knowledge? Ah, the shame, thought we; and Daniel, reading our thoughts, maybe, closed with a rush, and sat down.

A stir passed through us, like the going of wind among ripe wheat; then sprang into commotion at the sound of one rising behind us in a far corner. With one accord we swung around, and saw Henry Marvin himself—he the shining light of wisest Gorteen—standing by the china cupboard, one hand behind him, the other look which triflers had learned to dread.

"You'll excuse me for a minute, sir," said Henry to the preacher in that dry way of his, "but I'm anxious to put a question or two before we go." His eyes left the preacher and turned upon Daniel. "You've been sayin' something about hell," said Henry, his voice hard as an east wind. "Am I right in understandin' ye to believe there's still such a place?"

Ah! Around went we, eager to have sight of Daniel. He was still flushed. The preacher was whispering to him. He shook his head and rose quickly.

"Certainly," he answered, without hesitation.

"I know. But like everything else, it's changed of late, you'd be thinkin'?" We'd be foolish, you'd say," drawled Henry, "to call it a pit filled with fire an' brimstone any longer?"

"Call it that, if you wish," answered Daniel. "I think of it as something quite different."

"Just so. Well, it's your word against the Scriptures; but sure, if you're right, dyin' may come easier." At this something like a laugh ran among us; but Henry went on, implacably. "Then, there's this new heaven," said he. "Tell me, have ye read the book of 'Revelations'?"

"Revelations" is—

"Answer me," said Henry.

"Certainly I have."

"An' ye think it foolishness?" suggested Henry.

"I think it wonderful," answered Daniel. "But, like much else in the Bible, it has been misunderstood. Men have read into it what is not there."

"Ah, yes; that's because we're poor, ignorant folk, only able to take God's word for what we believe." Henry's eyes narrowed. "Then you'd disbelieve the Bible?" said he, point-blank.

"I believe it with all my heart," cried Daniel. "I protest—I protest—"

"You mean the new Bible?"

"I mean the Bible as it is—as God meant us to believe it. It's wonderful; and never so wonderful as when

"Answer Me," Said Henry.

read aright. I want you to understand," said Daniel to us all, "that in no way—"

"Keep to me," Henry broke in. "Isn't every word in the Bible God's own truth?"

"Modern research has shown—"

"Answer me," demanded Henry.

"I refuse to answer," cried Daniel, seeing at last where Henry would lead him. "I refuse to be placed willfully in a false position." He spread his arms. "I appeal to you all for justice. Have I said one word to you—"

"No; but you've said 10,000 words," said Henry, raising his voice. "An' if you're not ashamed of them, then I'm here tellin' ye that I am. Ye refuse to answer? Aye, because ye dare not. Ye protest? Yes, an' so do I. Fifty years I've lived, an' never before heard a minister of God make light of God's word. You are to come here preachin' atheism an' heresy to us! You to dare to match your little knowledge against the truth of heaven! You to talk a new Bible an' a new religion an'—"

"I protest! I protest!" cried Daniel. "Oh, this is terrible!"

"Man, the terrible thing is that I've had to sit listenin' to ye all this time," answered Henry. "No, sir," he said to the preacher, who had risen. "No disrespect to ye, but nothing more is needed 'cept to go our ways. An' may God forgive us if we've sinned this night."

Then Henry took his hat and went out, and one by one we followed him, leaving Daniel standing mute by the table, with Mary, his sweetheart, holding him by the hand.

I am glad that Mary stood by Daniel. I have often thought that we treated him harshly. Still, in those days—and later, it may be—the old plain things were quite sufficient for our simple needs, and teachers of new things we held in scorn. And surely there was truth in what the preacher said to Daniel that night when we all had gone: "Young man, you have begun climbing the hill at the top. Go down to the very bottom

Since Wednesday mid-afternoon the Dawes commission car has stood on the siding on the Frisco doing literally a land office business.

On the road since March 4th delivering Choctaw and Chickasaw deeds in person, the party has already delivered about one-third of their cargo. At Stonewall, where the car tarried for a day before coming to Ada, about 250 deeds were handed to allottees. Up to this hour at Ada there have been delivered about 500.

These are all for land selected before last year--most of the land having been selected 2 or 3 years ago.

The party started with 32,000 of such deeds. Their car is a combination one, one end being fitted up like a register of deeds office, the other like an ordinary passenger coach.

The following government clerks constitute the party in charge: W. P. Chaney, A. P. Conant, F. L. Doble, J. L. Gary, J. W. Horner, and W. A. Rambo.

Tonight the car goes on down to Mill Creek.

Gwin Mays & Co. are receiving much praise for their leading cigar "Pontotoc County." It's the best smoke in Ada--Gwin, Mays & Co. 61c.

Mr. Chas McPherrin, candidate for Congress, will address the people at Francis on next Saturday night 6-3rd.

RULES AND REGULATIONS OF THE STATE PRIMARY

Democratic candidates for United States senator are to have a free and easy, go-as-you-please contest in the primary election ordered at the Tulsa meeting by the Democratic state central committee, to be held uniformly throughout the new state May 23. A plurality vote nominates. It was ruled that the candidates are to be separated on the ticket as to the two territories voted upon at large, and the highest Oklahoma man and the highest Indian Territory man to be the parties nominated.

Electorates are not to vote for more than one candidate from each territory. The whole fight in committee centered around this construction. An effort was made to turn the proposition entirely loose and allow the two highest men, irrespective of territorial division, to be the nominees, but this, as well as an effort to hold up the senatorial race until the general election day, August 6, and allow that to be the primary nomination failed, after much discussion. The entire attendance appears to be enthusiastic over the result, although there is some question as to the committee's power to restrict the choice in a sectional way. No restrictions are placed upon nomination in state offices.

A simple plurality where more than two candidates are offering is sufficient. The primaries ordered only apply to state offices and United States senators. For congressional, judicial, legislative county and township nominations, the committee recommended that the committees in such districts call primaries for the day of the general primary, it being optional, however, whether this or the convention method is used. The state convention to ratify the result.

The basis of representation is to be fixed by the executive committee of the state, which was called to meet in Oklahoma City 27. Shawnee was the only other place offering for it.

To cover the expense of holding the primary candidates for United States senators are assessed $5, and all other state officers $1 for each of the seventy-five counties of the state. Candidates for supreme judge, who are nominated by districts, but voted upon at large, are assessed $10 for each county in their supreme judicial district. It was first proposed to assess candidates for governor and for United States senate $1,000 each.

Candidates' names and assessments must be filed with the state committee at least twenty days prior to March 23.

Other rules and requirements governing the conduct of the primary will be promulgated by the state committee.

Where The Democrat Was Wrong.

So uniformly right on public questions is The Democrat that seldom does The News feel warranted in taking issue with that paper. But there was something in the last issue of our contemporary which we can't pass up.

In commenting on the street sprinkling problem it advocated the use of crude oil, saying that four sprinklings of the liquid would allay the dust for an entire season, etc. The editor of The Democrat said he had seen it tried, indicating he knew whereof he spoke.

Yes, and we have seen it tried. We have seen the ladies' skirts all bedraggled in the only shame, too, thereafter. We have dug the greasy dust from about our ears, have picked up little white-froked girls where they had fallen, have breathed the nauseous stench from oiled streets which stank to heaven--so the writer reckons, though he never got that high up.

If the Democrat wants to force the dear ladies to wear shakers for underwear let it go on with its crude oil crusade. As for The News it's for clean water and an abundance of it. It would have the ladies still trip down the streets with impunity immaculate in summer gird without fear for their dainty lingerie.

Upon further reflection it occurs to us The Democrat's agitation might be all right provided all the women could be persuaded to wear short skirts short enough to be out of reach of the oil. The News has always advocated this sort of street dress. It is sensible, hygienic and usually becoming. Let The Democrat first start a crusade for the dress reform.

Speaking Postponed.

Under conditions as they developed it was thought best to postpone the speaking date of Hon Chas F McPherrin who was announced to address the Democratic voters of this place Wednesday night on his candidacy for Congress. Mr McPherrin hopes yet in the near future to speak to our people.

Rev G W Jefferson, E A Hardee and R W Smith came up from Hickory today to go out and attend at Midland the 5th Sunday meeting of the Baptist Banner Association.

An eight-hour day for all labor.
Exclusion of Oriental labor from the United States.

National legislation to suppress manipulation of the markets in farm products, railway and other stocks.
Income and inheritance tax.

National legislation to prohibit railroad and other corporations from capitalizing in excess of actual value.
Granting authority to the interstate commerce commission to ascertain the actual value by inventory, of the railroads of the country for the purpose of ascertaining the true basis of fixing rates.

Reduction of tariff on necessities of life and readjustment of schedules to a basis which will operate against the formation and protection of trusts.

Stringent anti-trust laws with effective provisions and enforceable penalties.

A more rigid and effective law against railroad rebates and discriminations, which will provide severe penalties for the guilty.

National encouragement of the movement to build and maintain good roads.

Nomination of all candidates for office by primary election, including the first two United States senators from Oklahoma.

Election of United States senators by popular vote.

Removal of restrictions from Indian lands other than homesteads of full-bloods.

Purchase by the state at fair value

and operation thereof for benefit of schools.

A fair prorata of federal buildings as compared with the most favored of other states.

Improvement of rivers as far as navigable within and contiguous to the state.

The right of Indians to be heard in court to obtain just settlement of their claims against the United States.

Equal rights to all special privileges to none.

I SHALL OPPOSE

Combination of capital for the purpose of reducing the price of labor or its product.

Usurpation by the federal government of powers granted by the Constitution to the several states.

Campaign contributions from corporations.

Employment of child labor.

Any legislation which fosters special privilege or promotes private monopoly.

The principle involved in the measure recently before congress known as the "emergency currency" bill. I believe that the issuance of money is a function belonging to the general government and should be exercised by it.

Upon the principles of democracy and the above declarations, I ask the support of democratic voters in the new state of Oklahoma for one of the two United States senators from this state.

PROFESSOR SAYS COMET WILL NOT HIT THE EARTH

"The world will be saved from destruction by the Matteucci comet," said Prof L Howell Lewis, yesterday. Prof Lewis received a communication from the department of agriculture at Washington saying that the Matteucci comet had been deflected in its mad flight toward the earth and would be eventually absorbed by the sun.

Ever since Prof Lewis first article in connection with this phantom monster of the air inquiries have poured into the Oklahoma office asking for further information. Great excitement prevailed in the negro settlements in Indian Territory. At Fort Gibson and Westville the negroes all quit work and held open meetings each evening, praying that the world be spared and the comet deflected.

Today was when the astronomers estimated that the comet would reach the earth providing its course was not changed. The continued warm weather of the past two weeks was a sign to the superstitious that the end of the world was near at hand and many believed that the prophecy of the Bible that the world would be destroyed by fire, was about to be fulfilled. It was reported that the first view of the comet would be had at 4 o'clock yesterday morning just above the horizon. Numerous Oklahoma City citizens looked furtively in that direction during the small hours of the morning and felt relief when the dull gray of the morning sky was not broken by the flash of Matteucci's tail--Oklahoman.

United States Senator.

The honorable M L Williams, a prominent attorney and orator of recognized ability, arrived in Ada this morning and will address the people this evening in behalf of the candidacy of M. L. Turner of Oklahoma City for the United States senate. To indicate the prominence of Mr. Williams and that those who attend his meeting will not be disappointed, it is suggested that Mr Williams has been a presidential elector and has very effectively spoken throughout the east under the auspices of the National Democratic committee in support of the Democratic nominee for president of the United States.

LOWDEN FOR DISTRICT CLERK.

One of Ada's Old-Timers Seeks the Democratic Nomination.

With pleasure The News presents to the Democratic voters of Pontotoc county the name of W. D. Lowden for their consideration in the primary May 23rd for the important office of district clerk.

Bill Lowden is too well known in these parts to warrant any elaborate introduction on the News part. He was reared in Kuttum county, Texas, where his father ran a mill and was famous in those good old days for hospitality. Among the confederate soldiers "Lowden's Mill" was noted for and wide as a haven of rest and plenty whose portals were ever thrown wide.

Twenty years ago Mr. Lowden came to Indian Territory and for ten years has been a resident of Ada, starting here as a stock clerk when Ada was a mere inland trading point and later going into business for himself. Previously he was devoted to farming.

This year is the first time Bill Lowden ever sought an office. He was chosen a pioneer alderman of the city, and for several years was kept on the school board. Not that he sought these honors, but his public services were so valuable the people would let him loose.

Scarcely could a better known or better liked man be found in this community than W. D. Lowden—not a better Democrat. Unquestionably he will make a splendid clerk.

Death of Howard Harper

Howard Harper, son of Art and Ada Harper of Center, died March 20 of congestive heart failure at two days. Little Howard was a sweet dispositioned, bright faced little fellow, full of life and playmates. Father and mother both are in the city, and are very much distressed by the loss of their little son. He will be missed in the home where he lived, and in the home where he was born. His death was a great loss to the family, and to the community. He was a sweet and loving little fellow, and his death was a great loss to the family, and to the community. He was a sweet and loving little fellow, and his death was a great loss to the family, and to the community.

So let him sleep that dreamless sleep. Our sorrow clustering around his head, Be comforted ye loved who weep, He lives with God—he is not dead.

CYCLONE BLOOD CLEANER

For those readers of this paper who have any form of blood impurities, who want new rich blood and plenty of it, try this.

Find Extra Direction on half ounce Compound Kitten one ounce Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla three ounces.

Shake well in a bottle and take one teaspoonful dose after each meal and at bedtime. After a few days you will find your blood purer and your health better.

This is the best medicine which I have used in all the blood cleaning business. It certainly does wonders for some people who are sickly, weak and out of sorts. It is known to relieve serious long standing cases of rheumatism and chronic backache quickly. Make up some and try it.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

GRADE READY FOR CHANGE

Katy's Line at Tyrola Will Make Detour of Sand Bars.

The Katy has practically finished the grading for the change of line on the Shawnee division in the vicinity of the South Canadian river bridge. The old line now in use runs down the river and some of it is built on sandbars. After crossing the river at Tyrola the line continues up a creek in order to get the low grade.

The new line commences two miles south of Tyrola, makes a detour along higher ground and comes back to the river at the old bridge. On the other side the line has been run on higher ground and strikes the old line near Keweenaw.

The grade of the new line has been set of sand which will be built in a very extensive grading.

LAND PATENTS OF INTEREST

Signatures of Two of the Early Presidents on Them

W. K. McCall of the Franklin County State Bank of Ottawa, who is somewhat of a gatherer of relics, has three land patents which are pretty interesting considering that the signatures of two of the early presidents of the United States are contained in two of them. Says the Kansas City Journal: Two of the instruments are patents of land in the northwest territory. One of them is to land in Belmont county, Ohio, and the other to land in Jefferson county, Jonathan Pickering received a track of land in the first named county. The patent was signed on June 23, 1820, by President Adams. The signature reads simply: J. Q. Adams. The other patent was made to William Johnson, and was signed by James Madison, president of the United States, on July 30, 1812. The third instrument gives a tract of land in LaSalle county, Illinois, to James Caldwell. The patent was signed by J. K. Stephens, secretary to President Polk, for the president on December 1, 1840. The instruments are made of buckskin. They were gathered by the father of Mr. McCall.
